

California at a Crossroads: Crisis and Opportunity

Crisis or Opportunity—which is it? In California, it is often both! At EdSource's 33rd Annual Forum, we'll look at the road ahead in a program that is among the most exciting we've ever presented.

California's Fiscal Crisis and its Impact on K-12 Education and Community Colleges

→ Get an update on the state budget and projections for 2010–11, including funding implications for both K–12 and community colleges, from California's Legislative Analyst Mac Taylor.

Middle Grades Practices and Student Achievement: Why Do Some Schools Do Better?

→ Be among the first to learn about the findings from a large-scale EdSource study—to be released in February—of middle grades practices in California and their relationship to student achievement.

Who Will Be California's Next Superintendent of Public Instruction?

→ The June election is fast approaching! Hear three candidates for State Superintendent of Public Instruction discuss the challenges facing K–12 and the best way forward for California schools.

The Community College System: Higher Expectations, Greater Challenges, New Approaches.

→ When students graduate from K–12, the greatest numbers of them head for community colleges. Join us for a first-of-its-kind discussion on the challenges and opportunities facing the community college system with Martha Kanter, Under Secretary, U.S. Department of Education and former chancellor of the Foothill-De Anza Community College District, and Jack Scott, Chancellor, California Community Colleges.
