AMST700 Prospectus Presentation

“The very motto of ‘Bali for the Balinese’ will help immensely. The Dutch do not move quickly, but they are extraordinarily steady. When they will have been ‘sold the idea,’ they will show their admirable good sense and assist in every way. For they have the welfare of the natives at heart and they are the greatest colonizing nation on earth. ... Whether the Balinese people will be able to keep their individuality, their customs, and their infinite happiness, depends upon themselves. All we can do is to point out the way”

- Andre Roosevelt's introduction for Hickman Powell's The Last Paradise, an American's 'Discovery' of Bali in the 1920s (Oxford UP 1930)

RESEARCH QUESTIONS

- How do the lived experiences of survivors of violence in Bali inform better understanding of the interconnectedness of security politics, identity politics, and tourist spaces?
- How does the legacy of violence become entangled with the desire to preserve a tourist's "paradise"?
- What are the effects of these global entanglements?

MAIN ARGUMENTS

(Re)Making Paradise explores the production and construction of how Bali became a “paradise” and how violence and the responses to that violence disrupted and then remade the imagined paradise to argue:

- “Paradise”—as a politics of imagination—is a nexus within which the racialized and gendered differentiation of colonized/colonizer is assembled.
- Demystifying fantasies of paradise in both Western and Indonesian national imaginaries and unveiling its racialization processes are imperative to better understand the multiplicities of lived experiences and struggles in a (post)colonial continuum.

(Re)Making Paradise shows that “paradise” is an epistemological “baggage” that (post)colonial subjects carry. Understanding the nuances, landscapes, soundscapes, and textures of such metaphorical “baggage”—which can become crippling heavy with time, helps shape the collective effort to survive and move forward.

CHAPTER I:
“THE LAST PARADISE: THE (RE) MAKING OF BALI DREAM AND COLONIAL IMAGINATION”

CHAPTER II:
“MA(R) KING SPACE:
MEMORIALIZATION OF GRIEF”

CHAPTER III:
“LEGIAN CACOPHONY: LOUDNESS, LABOR, AND THE POLITICS OF LISTENING”

CHAPTER IV:
“DIGITAL NOMADS AND SETTLER
VISCOSITY: THE KRISTEN GREY
DEPORTATION CASE”

CHAPTER V: “ESCAPE METROPOLITAN:
COMPLICITY AND THE GLOBAL NETWORK OF VIOLENCE”

VISUAL COMPONENT:
ETHNOGRAPHIC
DOCUMENTARY SHORT FILM
BASED ON CHAPTER II

CHAPTER II: “MA(R)KING SPACE: MEMORIALIZATION OF GRIEF”

- Investigates how—through ideas of memory and grief—lived experiences of the Bali bombing survivors negotiate, disrupts, and remake the notion paradise in their own terms
- Yayasan Isana Dewata (women-led, multi-religious and cultural non-profit, focusing on the well-being Indonesian Bali bombing survivors)
- Following their activism to purchase/lease a plot of land in Legian Street, Kuta Bali, to build Bali Peace Park
- Ethnographic notes from October 22, 2018: Bali bombing memorial v. IMF-World Bank annual meetings

Development of Liquid-Like Semiconducting Polymers

Stanford University Chemical Engineering

Advisor: Zhenan Bao

Wearable and flexible electronics are important for future Internet of Things (IoTs).

Transistors:

- Basic component of chips
- Control on/off of current

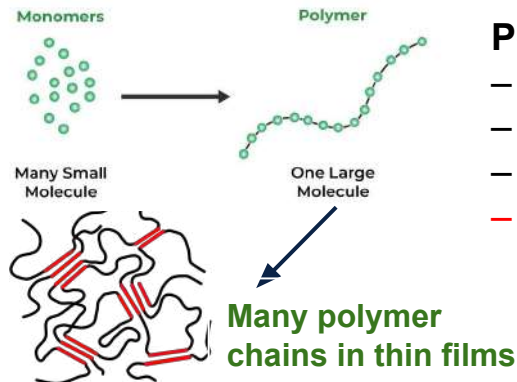

Semiconducting polymers are promising materials for flexible organic transistors.

14 Si Silicon Metalloid	32 Ge Germanium Metalloid
31 Ga Gallium Post-Transit	7 N Nitrogen Nonmetal

Current materials for transistors

- Inorganic (Si, Ge, GaN)
- Crystalline, highly-ordered, high charge transport mobility
- Brittle, low flexibility
- Expensive processing

Polymers for transistors

- Organic (C, S, O)
- Cheap processing
- Soft, highly flexible and stretchable
- Semicrystalline, low charge transport mobility

This project: Increase charge transport mobility of flexible polymers in a liquid-like state

Current progress and next steps

Progress Check

- ✓ Synthesis of semiconducting polymers
- ✓ Optimization of polymer structures
- ✓ Liquid-like state confirmation
- ☐ Device fabrication with liquid-like polymers
- ☐ Mobility measurement
- ☐ Stretchability and flexibility test
- ☐ Preparation of manuscript

Compounding impacts of COVID-19 on food security and women farmers of rural Nepal

University of California, Davis
International Agricultural Development
PI- Dr. Amanda Crump, UC Davis

Background

- COVID-19 and food security
- Nepal characterized by agrarian society, male out-migration with women as majority of farmers
- Rukum and Makwanpur- food insecure region
- Literature- smallholders more resilient, but we also know vulnerable populations more at risk

Research Questions

- ❑ What are the impacts of COVID-19 on women farmers?
  - Short-term impact
  - Long-term impact
- ❑ How did the coping mechanisms against food insecurity change with COVID19?
  - Migration
  - Wild foraging
- ❑ What are the different identities that shape these experiences?
  - Gender
  - Caste- Ethnicity
  - Age
  - Geographic location

Methodology

- ❑ Intersectional and Subaltern Feminist Theory
- ❑ Qualitative and participatory research methodology
- ❑ Collaboration with local organizations
- ❑ Fieldwork Summer 2022

Findings and Next steps

❑ Preliminary Findings

- Debt cycle for migration dependency
- Strengthened community solidarity
- Agroforestry and wild foraging as alternative to market systems

❑ Sharing results back to community via local organizations

One-child nation, multiple realities:
An analysis of child health disparities in China

*University of Southern California
Spatial Sciences Institute*

BACKGROUND

What we already know

- Children are born into different families—one-child family, or not.
- Non-singleton girls have the most disadvantaged health outcomes, as they have to compete limited resources with their male siblings.

What we know less about

Children are growing up in diverse family contexts—singleton prevalence.

RESEARCH QUESTION

What we don't know

- Would non-singleton girls' health outcomes get better, or worse, by living around many other one-child families?

China Health and Nutrition Surveys (1989-2015)

Note: Map boundary of China pertains to that of China Health and Nutrition Surveys'

KEY FINDING

One-child policy in place

- As community prevalence of singletons increase, health gaps between non-singleton girls and other children enlarges.
- The finding signals the multi-level disadvantages that non-singleton girls face, from both their families and communities.

CONVERSATION WITH A VERY HAPPY WOMAN

CONTEXT ON MARRIAGE BY ABDUCTION IN GEORGIA:

- Spread through the East(Central Asia)/Indigenous to the Caucasus Region.
- Increasingly popular after the fall of Soviet Union in 1991.
- Men abducted their intended brides by force or deception with help from their male friends.
- A day spent in Captivity= Forced marriage.
- In 2004, Marriage by abduction became a criminal act of kidnapping.
- In 2015, statistics showed 576 underage school students quit school due to bridenapping.
- December 1997 Tea Kvakhadze was forcefully kidnapped into marriage by Aleksandre Giligashvili

WORK DONE SO FAR:

- May 2021- 35 Minute Documentary compiled of 25 hours of VHS tapes from 1997-2005 and interviews with my parents, grandparents and myself.
- Link to its teaser.

Future Plans:

- 2 short documentaries by the end of 2022-2023 academic year;- One centered around women in family and another made up of journeys of women who survived Marriage by Abduction.
- Distribution... education... funding... active change... resources and progress towards healing for generations of women in Georgia.

Elective Courses

- Clinical Lactation
- Seminars

Seminars

- Topics in Epidemiology of Maternal and Child Nutrition
- Public Policy in Maternal and Child Nutrition
- Principles of Evidence-based Practice
- Principles of Adult Education

Student Project/Practicum

Research, clinical or evaluation project during the second year in the program

Core Courses

- Nutrition During Pregnancy
- Lactation and Infant Nutrition
- Child and Adolescent Nutrition
- Applied Research Methods

“Among its biological uses,

~ Moshe Feldenkrais

Body-Mind Centering® (BMC®)

“Development is not a linear process but occurs in overlapping waves with each stage containing elements of all the others.

Because each previous stage underlies and supports each successive stage, any incomplete development or skipping of any stage leads to perceptual/movement problems.

By returning to these basic patterns, we can re-pattern our responses and establish more efficient nervous pathways to support our movement.”

"At the root, it's about how we form values, and what we devalue... how it crystallizes in the psyche and how it constellates in the soma (body)"
~ Dr. Amber McZeal

Somatic Abolitionism | Anti-Racist Practices

"Few skills are more essential than the ability to settle your body.

If you can settle your body, you are more likely to be calm, alert, and fully present, no matter what is going on around you. A settled body enables you to harmonize and connect with other bodies around you, while encouraging those bodies to settle as well.

Gather together a large group of unsettled bodies—or assemble a group of bodies and then unsettle them—and you get a mob or a riot.

But bring a large group of settled bodies together and you have a potential movement—and a potential force for tremendous good in the world.

A calm, settled body is the foundation for health, for healing, for helping others, and for changing the world."

The Peripheries of Empire: Art Workers in Tibet in the People's Republic of China, 1960-2008

- Examine how state artists were integral actors in the creation of myths regarding Tibet's history, people, customs and future.
- Four Major Art Projects
  - Painters (Dong Xiwen, Wu Guanzhong, and Shao Jingkun) sent to Tibet in the early 1960s
  - Film crew creating major motion picture Nongnu (1962)
  - Sculptors constructing the large life-sized sculptural installation Wrath of the Sefs (1975)
  - Chen Danqing's Tibet Group series of realist paintings
- Three Main Goals
  - Reconsider how artworks developed during the Maoist period (1949-1976) continued, rather than broke, the chain of Chinese modern artistic development since the late 19th century
  - Uncover the ways in which race and ethnicity, as well as national space, continue to be constituted through visual representations
  - Analyze how the conceptual shift towards defining artists as “art workers” impacted subsequent development of Chinese arts in the 20th century and beyond

Geo-corporeal Politics of Performance and Feminist Strategies in Brazil

University of California, Berkeley
Performance Studies

Statement of the Problem:

Radical action often gets figured as massive protests or formal elections, but I argue that we need to pay attention to the level in which they begin at the body. By turning our attention to the body, we can consider how these practices matter on the scale of the everyday and manifest as quotidian subversive practices rooted in women-centered knowledges that sustain their communities and political efforts, all of which I argue gets under-recognized.

My dissertation seeks to take seriously where the political exists outside of the normative definitions of engaging in the political sphere. What is made clear is that the art world is a major site of the battlefield for discursive and material warfare against institutionalized forms of oppression.

My research considers how women and marginalized communities in Brazil are redefining “art” outside of a historical Eurocentric canon and instead using it towards freedom planning and unsettling systems of power.

Examples of the artwork:

Examples of the artwork:

Theoretical Framework:

I use interdisciplinary methods of visual analysis, discourse analysis, close reading, archival research, and ethnography.

I rely on Performance studies, Black Studies, Gender Studies, and Indigenous Studies for my theoretical grounding and analysis to resist conventional ways of: separating product from process and maker from thing; to take into account the animacy of other-than-human beings; to read every performance as a fluid bridge between - and within- every aspect of artistic production and life. A study that puts the named Afro-Brazilian and Indigenous artists in conversation has not been done in a rigorous and in-depth manner that moves beyond the short form exhibition catalog essay and proposes a new lens to approach art and performance that is different than art history studies and leans into the interdisciplinary potential found in performance studies scholarship.
